THE Jewelers' Security Alliance continues to gain in numbers. Membership in the Alliance is the best evidence a jeweler can offer that he has that prudence that should characterize all members of his craft.

GEORGE F. KUNZ the other night in Boston at a lecture broke a diamond on an anvil to illustrate that the stone is easy to shatter, although difficult to cut. Mr. Kunz does not often repeat this illustration.

THE sympathy of the trade is with the Jacquard Watch and Jewelry Company of Kansas City, Mo., and the hope is general that the suspension may prove only temporary and that the company may yet enjoy many years of prosperity.

SOME people pooh pooh the belief that Friday is an unlucky day. John B. Yates assigned on Friday, March 22, 1894, and his creditors, who are still demanding a settlement, but see a very poor prospect of it, think Friday a very unlucky day—for them.

BURGLARS have been again at work in Providence. The Tilden-Thurber establishment was the scene of the most recent attempted exploit. The rascals were frightened away by a citizen—not, mark you, by a Providence policeman. Crooks who visit Providence, or are to the manor born, pay very little attention to the Providence police, and the Providence police, who appear to be the very pink of courtesy in that respect, reciprocate by paying very little attention to the crooks.

THE YATES TANGLE.

A Year Has Elapsed Since the Failure and the End is Not Yet.

Some of the preferred creditors of John B. Yates, formerly of 21 and 23 Maiden Lane, including a number of others who hold unsatisfied claims against him, are asking some pointed questions as to when a settlement will be perfected.

Mr. Yates made an assignment to John B. Brown on March 22, 1894, naming these preferred creditors: Fourth National Bank on notes of $2,000; George W. Yates, Sr., of Saratoga, N. Y., on a note, $2,000, Henry Ginnell & Co., 31 Maiden Lane, on a note, $1,231.43; Crescent Watch Case Company, 21 and 23 Maiden Lane, $2,000; N. H. White & Co., 21 and 23 Maiden Lane, and George H. Senior, for money loaned.

At a meeting of creditors held April 6, Assignee Brown made the following statement: Assets, $19,000; liabilities, $59,000, and preferred claims amounting in all to $7,200. On Mr. Yates being questioned as to the discrepancies between the assets and liabilities was unable to give a satisfactory explanation.

A committee was appointed composed of: Frank Simmons of Henry Ginnell & Co., M. D. Mason of N. H. White & Co., and Irving Smith of the Crescent Watch Case Company to make an investigation.

In May the committee at a meeting of creditors submitted substantially the following facts.

"Previous to September, 1893, the books were in a chaotic state. The committee found it utterly impossible to make an accounting. From that date to Thursday, March 22, the day of the failure, the running and incidental expenses, footed up $7,000. An entry was also disclosed that Mr. Yates had withdrawn $5,500 during the intervening time between those dates. This amount caused a deficiency in the working capital which in conjunction with the selling of stock at a trifle over cost, and in some instances as quoted by several ledger entries, below actual value, was the primary cause of the failure.

It was learned by John B. Brown, the assignee, that Robbins & Appleton, held for security on several of Mr. Yates' notes about thirty or more watch movements, which are not included in his list of assets. It appears that Robbins & Appleton sold Mr. Yates, previous to the failure, these movements and accepted notes for the amount of the purchase.

As these notes were not met on maturity Robbins & Appleton claim the movements for more payment."

The schedule revised showed actual assets of

A resolution was also adopted to the effect that all parties who had sold Mr. Yates stock should buy it back at figures quoted at the time of the transaction, and that the assignee be instructed to close up the affairs of the firm with the greatest dispatch. This was over a year ago and there seems little hope of a settlement being perfected for some months to come. A sale of the assets was recently consummated, but Mr. J. Brown, the assignee, requested by a REVIEW reporter to give the amount realized refused, and added that if the preferred creditors wished to disclose the facts he was agreeable. The preferred creditors, however, stated that they were in ignorance of the facts and expressed the hope that the affair would be settled at least this year.

One preferred creditor, in very plain language, denounced the dilatoriness and further hinted that it would be well to make a sweeping investigation. Several believe that creditors will not realize 10 cents on the dollar.

In the meantime, Mr. Yates has resumed business under the style of the Yates Company, at 46 Maiden Lane.

Who'll Get This Job?

Proposals for the furnishing of materials and performing the work for putting in and maintaining an electric time service in the new Criminal Court House in New York are being advertised for by the Sinking Fund Commissioners.

FOILED BY A CITIZEN.

Mysterious Gang of Robbers Showed Up at Tilden-Thurber's Store.

PROVIDENCE, March 7.

The mysterious gang of crooks who have had such wonderful success in this city since the beginning of the present year appeared again last night and selected as their place for plundering the extensively stocked store of the Tilden-Thurber Company.

This building and the Exchange Building are connected by means of a specially devised fire escape.

There is no watchman employed in the immense store of Tilden & Thurber. They rely on the burglar alarm system, all the store doors and windows and the office safe being connected with the system. This fact the crooks undoubtedly knew and their plan was to cut out one of the large lights of glass on the second floor. One of the crooks gained access to the fire escape, while the second stood guard in the lane between the two buildings.

The man who was at work on the fire escape was seen by a citizen, who summoned Officer William O'Neill. The crook who was doing guard duty saw the citizen rushing toward Exchange Place, and realizing that they had been discovered, he gave the alarm and with his pal escaped.

Jennings' Trunk Stolen and Recovered.

BUFFALO, March 7.

Several days ago there arrived at one of the principal hotels a Mr. Jennings, of the firm of Jennings Bros., manufacturing jewelers of Bridgeport, Conn.

He had with him several trunks, such as sales men of his class carry, and made the rounds of the larger jewelry stores. This afternoon he prepared to leave the city, and packed and checked his trunks. The trunks were taken from the baggage room to the sidewalk, at a rear entrance to the hotel, to await the coming of a baggage wagon. A porter was told to watch the trunks, but, as he was needed elsewhere, left them to take care of themselves for a few minutes. On his return he found that one trunk had disappeared, and he immediately reported the facts to the office.

Such was the situation when detectives reached the hotel. Almost directly across the street is an alley which turns back of the Cleveland Democracy Club House, and as the detectives approached this bend they heard the clinking of silver and the striking of a spade into the earth. They saw two men bending over a trunk. The trunk had been broken in, and the men were transferring its contents to a hole in the ground near it.

The robbers were taken to Police Headquarters, one of them giving his name as Michael Hickey, and said he came to Buffalo from Albany this morning. All the silver was recovered. Mr. Jennings did not know of his narrow escape till after it was all over and the property and the thieves had been found.

DEATH OF ISAAC STONE.

David and William Stone, comprising the firm of Stone Bros., manufacturing jewelers, 535 Broadway, New York, have the sympathy of the trade in the death of their father, Isaac Stone, which occurred at Exin, Prussia, March 3. Mr. Stone, who was in the 81st year of his age, retired from active business ten years ago. Prior to this time he was largely interested in the sale of grain and other produce. A widow and ten children, four boys and six girls, survive him. Six of his childrens three boys and three girls, reside in this country. One son, E. Stone, is in the jewelry business at 527 Broadway.

The establishment of Stone Bros. was closed Tuesday last, the day of the funeral in Europe.

Abe Fry and His Creditors.

Creditors of Abe Fry of Atlanta, Ga., met at the New York Jewelers' Board of Trade, Thursday afternoon, Emanuel Arnstein of Arnstein Bros. & Co., 37 Maiden Lane, presiding.

There were present eleven creditors, representing an indebtedness of $15,000, or about 75 per cent. of the total amount due to merchandise creditors. Mr. Arnstein stated that Mr. Fry had offered 25 cents on the dollar in cash in settlement of all claims. This, however, did not meet with the approval of the creditors, and it was moved that Mr. Fry be so apprised with the recommendation that if a better offer was made it would in all probability be accepted.

It was learned that the largest creditors, in fact, a majority of those interested, flatly refuse to accept terms of compromise under any circumstances.

Mr. Fry on Feb. 1 gave a chattel mortgage on stock and fixtures for $9,000, and on the same day a receiver was appointed. Mr. Fry made an assignment on Feb. 2, with liabilities of about $36,000, assets $20,000, the stock being appraised at $20,000, and unsecured debts of between $27,000 and $28,000.

It is reported that several local creditors have secured judgment against the debtor for large amounts.

A BUSINESS CHANGE.

W. J. Eroo Becomes Part Owner of the Hanna Jewelry Store.

NEW CASTLE, Pa., March 7.

A change occurred Saturday in one of New Castle's oldest and best known business houses. Nearly fifty years ago Mr. J. C. Hanna started a jewelry store here, and has ever since been at the head of the firm which some years ago became J. C. Hanna & Son, Mr. Hanna having taken in his son, M. Loy, as a partner. The musical department of the store has grown to such large proportions that Mr. Loy Hanna, who had the active management of the store, felt that it required his entire time and attention, and so he has retired from the jewelry store, having sold his interest to Mr. J. Eroo, who some years ago, ran a store in this city, but who for fifteen years has been traveling for one of the largest wholesale jewelry firms in New York. The new firm will be known as Hanna & Eroo. Mr. M. Loy Hanna has purchased the musical department of the store and will give it his entire time and attention. He will occupy the same room with Hanna & Eroo.

Scarf snap catches of silver with the signs of the Zodiac done in enamel are the latest in this line.

Initial cuff links inlaid with enamel or studded with diamonds and other gems are shown in great variety.

Ink wells of Dresden ware, hand-painted and further decorated with silver deposit, have been brought forward.

Combination shirt stud sets wrought in gold and silver, including a line of enamel decorated specimens are extremely popular.

The beryl is seen to the best advantage when surrounded with brilliants, and has become a popular central setting in scarf pins.

Locket and fob charms of platina and gold or a combination of the two metals handsomely chased, with a solitaire diamond emerging from its centre, are having a wide sale.

* * *

Numbered among novel lace pins recently displayed is a single pansy inlaid with enamel, encircled by a wreath of miniature fac-similes of the same flower each having a small diamond centre.

Simple in construction is a heart outlined in slender wire, holding a diamond, a sapphire and a ruby at its points.

A chain of small daisies between two flexible gold bands composes a new bracelet of an admired style.

There are many double bow-knots and other designs set solidly with diamonds or pearls for brooches and hair ornaments, but the fleur-de-lys with a single stone introduced in the centre or studded with turquoises leads all rivals.

Visiting card cases made of petunia-colored satin or pomegranite hues of moire silk, bound with tiny clasps of silver or silver-gilt are very pretty. They are lined with pale heliotrope or tri-colored silk to suit varied tastes.

The Napoleonic craze being at its height, miniatures of the great commander framed in silver or silver-gilt are much sought for. Bust fac-similes of larger productions in bronze or wrought in silver are also shown in a line of boudoir ornaments.

To possess a ring, watch or souvenir spoon giving the signs of the Zodiac or other data commemorative of natal day anniversaries is a prevailing fad that bids fair to become chronic. Jewels and semi-precious stones also play an important part in the make-up of these trifles, but in each instance are chosen to symbolize predominating characteristics.

THE GOULD-CASTELLANE GIFTS.

They Include the Esterhazy Diamond, And Historic Gems.

The presents were in the library, on the second floor, directly above the East Indian room. The superb jewels were laid out on the library table on a cover cloth of heavy red velvet, while the tops of the bookcases about the room were converted into shelves for the beautiful and almost priceless gifts.

Among the rarest and most costly of the bride's presents was a brooch fashioned in the shape of a heart. In the centre was the world famous Esterhazy diamond, surrounded by eleven diamonds, each of them large enough to be worn as a single stone. This was the gift of Miss Helen Gould.

Mr. and Mrs. George J. Gould's present was a collar of pearls, consisting of ten strands, each pearl being the size of a good sized pea. The strands were crossed by bars of platinum, holding rows of white brilliants dividing the pearls into ten compartments. In each bar were twelve diamonds. In the entire collar there were seventy-two diamonds and 800 pearls.

Mr. Frank Gould presented a chain of 200 diamonds which could be worn in coils about the neck or entwined as a bracelet about the wrist.

Mr. Howard Gould gave a large knot or cluster of diamonds. Each end of the glittering ribbon had as a tassel a superb blue and pink diamond.

The Marquis and Marquise de Castellane presented a superb necklace, consisting of five ropes of pearls, each string of which has historic interest, one having belonged to Henri Quatre, another to Marie Antoinette. At one end of the necklace, securing the five strands, was a magnificent square emerald of exceeding beauty surrounded by twenty-four diamonds. This is an heirloom in the De Castellane family and could only pass to the eldest son. Another present by the Marquise de Castellane was a ruby and sapphire ring.

Count Jean de Castellane's present was a diamond hat pin of great beauty of design. Prince del Drago presented a diamond horseshoe pin. Gen. and Mrs. Eckert presented a superb diamond star.

One of the most magnificent of the presents was a tiara of diamonds, presented by Mr. and Mrs. Edwin Gould.

On the book shelves were fans of every description, clocks in leather, Dresden, Sevres and ormolu clocks; tiny watches and watches studded with jewels, silver, gold and glass jars, with gold tops decorated with curious workmanship and ornamented with monograms surrounded with coronets; silver pitchers, salvers, loving cups, silver in every shape and of every form; cut glass bowls, decanters, tete-a tete sets in silver, china and glass.

The Peridot.

Jewelers say that the peridot is a species of olive, of the same class as the beryl, aquamarine and topaz, and that it is, in fact, the ancient "topazion," otherwise known as the chrysolite. It is found in Egypt, Ceylon, Peru and Brazil, good crystals being extremely rare. Of its various shades of green—olive, leaf, pistachio or leek—the clear leaf green is the most admired, as a rule. Of all the precious stones the peridot is the most difficult to polish. The final touch is given on a copper wheel moistened with sulphuric acid, a process which requires the greatest care, for, if dipped into the acid, the stone has the peculiarity of becoming soluble. Sometimes it is cut in rose form or en cabochon, like the carbuncle, but it is better and more valuable when worked in small steps, as the brilliance is thereby increased.

Strange Incident of the Mails.

A lady in Boston wrote some letters and sealed them, as is her custom, with a Moorish coin having a tiny hook in its back. Her correspondents all knew this peculiar seal and how highly it is prized from its antiquity and the stylish form it takes in the wax. Called suddenly from the room these letters were soon after posted by a servant in the nearest box, and not till then did the owner of the rare coin miss it from the table. The room was searched, and finally the maid dispatched to await the letter collector on his next round. But he declared nothing had been seen of any such seal, and then the search began indoors again, but with no better luck. A few days after this lady received a letter from Canada sealed with the familiar Moorish hieroglyphics! The mystery was soon explained, for on opening the envelope it was learned that this heavy seal had stuck to the letter sent from Boston, and though passing through so many hands had arrived intact, to the great astonishment of the recipient.—Boston Herald.

TOUCHED FOR HIS STONE.

A Diamond Stolen from a Traveling Man.

Sometime between midnight and morning a bold diamond robbery occurred on a Pittsburg passenger train, No. 15, due here at 3 A. M., but which was an hour late this morning and did not arrive until about 4 o'clock.

J. R. Theise, who travels for a New York wholesale jewelry firm, was relieved of seventeen fine diamonds which had been set in a horseshoe necktie pin.

When the train was nearing the east yards Mr. Theise, who had been asleep from the time the train left Lima, got up to put on his overcoat and gather up his baggage. When putting on his overcoat Mr. Theise put his hand up to feel if his pin was in its proper place and was shocked to find it gone. He quickly looked around him but saw no one who looked like a suspicious character or appeared to be at all aware of the loss.

Mr. Theise at once notified the conductor and both men went through the train very carefully. They found no one, however, who appeared to know anything of the robbery or who acted in a suspicious manner, and the traveling man was compelled to leave the train without getting any further clue. Theise stated that he would not have taken $1,000 for the pin, not that it was worth that much, but from the fact that it had been given to him by his mother who had recently died.

The seventeen cut stones were very brilliant and the workmanship on the pin was exceedingly fine. Mr. Theise further stated that he believed the thief or thieves had come to this city on the same train that he did, as he remembers of two tough-looking men getting on the train at some small station in Ohio and jostling down the aisle. It is likely that when they passed his seat one of them reached down and quickly jerked out the brilliants.—Fort Wayne Sentinel.

THE CLOCK IN THE SKY.

How to Tell the Time of Night by the Dipper.

A reader of the New York Sun writes to that paper as follows:

TO THE EDITOR OF THE SUN—Sir: In the Sun of to-day there appears an article headed, "A Celestial Clock."

I fail to see how a person waking in the middle of the night, with no definite idea as to the real time, could ascertain the same by looking at the Polar Star and Great Bear and making use of any information contained in your article and diagram.

The trouble is the "dipper" is liable to be found above or below east or west of the Polar Star at 9 o'clock; all depends upon the season of the year it is that you happen to make the test.

Some years ago I copied an article from a Western newspaper ("A Clock in the Sky," it was called) which I think makes it quite clear that correct time can be had whenever the North Star and "dipper" are in sight. It was as follows:

"Most people know how to find the North Star from the 'pointers,' and also know that these 'pointers' swing around the North Star like the hour hand of a great clock once in twenty-four hours, less four minutes.

"At the beginning of our calendar year these 'pointers' are set about four and a quarter hours slow.

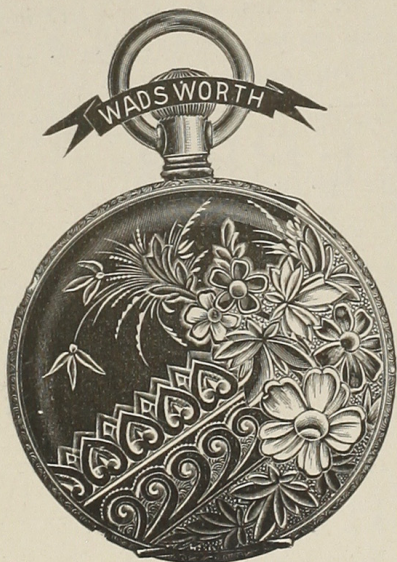

"There must be a correction for the day of the year, which, from the beginning of the year, is near enough to two hours for each month, and say four minutes for the odd days.

"To that we add double the time that is marked out by the position of our 'pointers' to be read from the sky, as if a great ordinary clock face had its centre at the North Star.

"This sum is next to be subtracted from the four hours and fifteen minutes (above mentioned) increased by as many times twelve hours as may be needed to allow of the subtraction—or that is, from $16\frac{1}{4}$ to $28\frac{1}{4}$, or $40\frac{1}{4}$ hours; or, perhaps, near the end of the year, from $52\frac{1}{4}$, and the remainder is nearly the true hour of the night.

"Thus, on Jan. 31 the 'pointers' seemed to mark 10 minutes past 2. Doubling this and adding two hours correction for the calendar, and subtracting from sixteen hours and fifteen minutes, it showed the hour of the night as 5 minutes to 10 o'clock. See?"

A DIAMOND CARPET.

It is said that the most costly carpet in the world is in the treasure room of the maharajah of Baroda, India. The carpet is some 10 feet by 6, and woven from strings of pearls with large central and corner circles of diamonds. It required three years to make it and its cost was $1,000,000. It was the freak of an Indian potentate. Khande Rao, and he intended to send it to Mecca as a present to a Mohammedan lady.

OLDEST SILVERSMIT

He is Nearly Eighty-four Years of Age and a Very Sprightly Octogenarian at That.

Plenty of ups and downs in this ever changing world have been the lot of the Meriden Britannia company's oldest employe, as well as the oldest silversmith in the city, Edward J. Molloy, who rooms at 19 Colony street.

Mr. Molloy will be eighty-four years of age on the 11th of April, and is by far the sprightliest octogenarian to be found in the city or state. Enjoying the best of health it is a pleasure to him to hear the 7 o'clock whistle toot every morning. Mr. Molloy has had more than sixty-five years' experience in sterling silver and britannia ware factories, and is held in esteem by all who know the little, white-headed old gentleman.

Mr. Molloy can recollect when there was no spinning, turning or electro plating; when a silversmith would make a tea pot or sugar basin from beginning to end. A bellows and a forge would be used to heat the crucible containing the silver and charcoal would be the heating power. A silversmith would take his compasses and mark out the size of the silver article he wished to make.

Various sized hammers were then used to "dip it up" and to fashion it into the required shape. A workman would have to be careful to leave the sides of the pot of an even thickness and not to hit hard enough to go through the silver. After the body was made, the smith would set about putting on the trimmings. The spout would be moulded on an iron die into two parts; these parts were soldered together with silver solder and fitted into the hole that had been cut out for it.

The handle would also be cast in two parts and the same process gone through with. The smith would then begin to make the cover of the pot, the hinges and the tip. All this took much time and labor. Apprentices in those days would have to pay their "master" to learn the trade and were required to serve seven years before becoming a journeyman.

Mr. Molloy well recalls the troublesome time in New York during the war and was an eye witness to the draft riots and other scenes of disorder. Work got dull in the solid silver line and for a while he made scabbards that graced the side of many an officer. Mr. Molloy made the acquaintance of the late Augustus L. Gangloff, while he was working at Wood & Hughes' shop in the metropolis.

Mr. Gangloff came into the shop to work as a chaser, and one noon, some of his "funny" shop-mates kicked over his pots that were filled with cement. Mr. Molloy remonstrated with his fellow workmen and this coming to the ears of Mr. Gangloff caused a strong friendship to spring up. Mr. Gangloff afterwards became a prominent foreman in the Britannia shop, his successor being Henry W. Hirschfeld.

Mr. Molloy's trade had been ruined by the spinning machinery that had been introduced in New York, and in '67 he came to Meriden. Times were dull then and it was a year before he began to hammer and straighten out work from the presses. He is still at it at the old shop.

He is a widower and has a daughter living out west in addition to these sons: William V., George A., Charles E. and Richard J. Molloy. All of his sons work in the silver factories here and in Hartford.- Meriden Daily Journal.

Three Boy Burglars Locked Up.

Three youthful burglars and about $25 worth of plunder were captured Tuesday night by Special Policeman McCrory and Barlow of the Oak street police.

The burglars were Thomas Hardy, 14 years old, of 69 Cherry street; James Hayes, aged 10, of 56 Cherry street, and James Tallen, 8 years old, who lives with his mother at 7 Batavia street.

Shortly after 6 o'clock Mrs. Tallen entered the station house, leading her son James by the hand. She told Sergeant Bell, who was at the desk, that a number of older boys were enticing her boy to lead a life of crime, and that she wanted it stopped.

Jimmy is so small that the Sergeant did not know he was there at first, his head not being visible above the desk. The lad had told his mother of a robbery which he and a gang of boys whose leader is a young man, had committed that evening. He gave the police the names and addresses of Hardy and Hayes, who were accordingly arrested.

Leading the policemen to 66 New Chambers street, Jimmie took them into the hall, and there they found three pieces of table silver plated ware all brand new, wrapped in tissue paper. These were taken to the station house. Although he did not know the name of the street where the robbery was committed, he led the policeman to 12 Dutch street, which is occupied by the Empire Silver Plate Company, of which F. Zahn is the proprietor.

The boys had entered the place through an opening too small to admit a man.

FLIRTED WITH A LUNATIC.

A Jewelry House Drummer Has an Experience.

A young and pretty girl entered the train at the Vandalia depot in Logansport and every man in the car moved over in his seat in order to make room for her. She looked neither to the right nor to the left, however, but walked quietly to the forward end of the car and took an unoccupied seat. Right behind her was a well-dressed jewelry house traveler, bright and smart as the best of them. He, like the others, sized the girl up and resolved to win her if it was a possible thing to do. He did not get an opportunity to speak to her until the train passed Long Cliff insane hospital just out of the town, and then he broke the ice by asking her what sort of an institution it was.

"Why, don't you know?" she answered, "that is my home. I have lived there for ever so long. I am going away now; in fact, I am on my way to Hawaii to take Queen Lil's place."

The roar of the train drowned her voice and he did not exactly understand her; still he thought she talked rather queenly. They talked on one subject and then another and he finally left his seat and took the place beside her. She did not object, and when the other fellows saw how friendly she was they looked upon him with envy. When the train whistled for the town of Flora a portly gentleman entered the car and walked up to the seat.

"Come, Queen Lil, we get off here," he said.

"No, I won't go," replied the beautiful young creature, "unless the Prince of Wales here goes with me."

By this time it dawned upon the traveler that he had been talking with a lunatic, and he lost no time in getting out of the seat. He was not to escape so easily, however, for the girl screamed and ran after him, calling him every pet name she could think of. She grabbed him by the coat collar, tore all the buttons from his vest and was just getting her work in on his face when the heavy-set man, assisted by the conductor and brakeman, grabbed her and carried her screaming and kicking from the train. When she was safely out everybody in the car had a good laugh at the expense of the smart drummer.

"Whew," breathed the unfortunate, as he threw himself in a seat and mopped his face with his torn handkerchief.

"Say, Jim, she was a beaut," said one of the drummer's friends, whose sides were almost bursting with laughter.

Jim buried his face in his hands and said nothing.

TOLD ABOUT PRECIOUS STONES.

Mr. George Kunz Opens a New Lowell Institute Lecture Course.

Boston, Mass., March 5

Mr. George Kunz, who is in charge of precious stones under the United States Survey, opened a series of eight Lowell Institute lectures in Huntington Hall last night on "precious stones."

He dealt with "History, Superstition, and Folk-lore." The use of precious stones, he said, antedated all history. Jade was used in the neolithic period; in the lake dwellings flint, agate jade jewelry was known to have been used. But for the earliest traces of the precious stones they must go to the east. The ruby and sapphire had been used as decorations for temples from unknown times. Traces of the love for and the use of gems had been found in the pre-historic mounds.

The lecturer threw on the screen, with the aid of the stereopticon, views of jewelry and precious stones used as ornaments in various periods. They represented India, Etrusca, Egypt, Babylonia, Palestine, Greece and Italy, and included such materials as agate, jasper, rock crystal, sapphire, amethyst, lapis lazuli, ruby, beryl, quartz, cornelian, chalcedone, topaz, onyx, serpentine turquoise and opal.

The title pages of works dealing with gems and precious stones, and ranging from the classical period in literature down to modern times, were also shown. Some of the results of Schliemann's excavations were referred to, and Pliny's descriptions cited, Mr. Kunz showing how the knowledge of precious stones had increased with progress in the science of mineralogy. The lecturer next took up and gave an interesting account of the beliefs and superstitions which had from the earliest times been associated with precious stones, pointing out that some of them had survived down to our own time.

In the past, precious stones were often pulverized for medicinal purposes. Almost every precious stone had attributed to it some marvellous potency. Precious stones were supposed to bring good or evil to the wearer, to give him courage, strength, discernment and long life. One of the beliefs about precious stones was that which regarded diamonds as capable of propagating themselves.

JEWELER TAYLOR'S DEATH.

ORANGE, N. J., March 6.

George C. Taylor, who for several years has conducted a little jewelry store at 24 Washington Place, East Orange, near the Brick Church Station off the Delaware, Lackawanna and Western Railroad, was found dead in bed by his wife when she arose this morning. He was sixty years old and had been married twice.

Mrs. Taylor, without saying anything to the neighbors or to the authorities about her husband's death, locked up the store and took a train to New York to consult with some relatives in that city.

Policeman Held for Trial.

William K. Scott, a patrolman of the Greenpoint avenue station, was held for trial by Justice Watson in the Ewen Street Police Court, Williamsburg Tuesday, on a charge of assault preferred by Alfred Sorensen, a jeweler of 217 Manhattan avenue. Sorensen says that on January 27 Scott clubbed him.

His Useful Overcoat.

John O'Brien, 28 years, of 161 West 100th street, Tuesday afternoon went into the jewelry store of Free & Fowler, 456 Sixth avenue. He visited the store ostensibly to arrange for repairs to a pair of small diamond earrings. He threw his overcoat over a case of gold watches on the counter, and when he picked it up to leave the store it was noticed that some of the watches were gone.

The stranger was pursued, and he ran into a saloon and out of the side door into an alley. He threw away the watches as he ran, but they were recovered. The thief was caught and taken to the Twentieth street station house.

Inventor Fest Dead.

Charles P. Fest died at his residence, Stenton and Wyoming avenues, Germantown, Pa., last week. Mr. Fest was born in Wurtemberg, Germany, in 1842, and came to America in 1852. In 1861 he enlisted in the Union army, and after being discharged in 1865, resumed business in New York as an engraver of pearl and ivory, which trade he learned when a youth. In 1879 he removed to Philadelphia, and a few years later to Germantown, where he conducted a business on Lena street.

Mr. Fest was also an inventor, and spent thousands of dollars in experimenting with many of the various plants suggested for aerial navigation. His latest device was one for making hot air for inflating ballons, as he objected to gas being used, because of the short time it could be kept in suspension. He intended constructing a mammoth balloon in which to journey to Europe, but, because of the increasing of his regular business, was obliged to abandon the project. He was a member of Ellis Post, No. 5, G. A. R. A wife and several children survive him.

He Kept the Watch.

"I was at Old Orchard one time and attended one of the meetings led by Rev. Stephen Merritt," said a Lewiston gentleman to a Lewiston Journal reporter. "After a short address the people were invited to lay their jewels on the altar for missions. Women wept as they tore off earrings, bracelets and gold rings. Diamonds were given freely. Mr. Merritt himself placed a gold watch on the altar. Finally up rose one man with a ponderous frame and slowly pulled from his pocket a shining gold watch. It was worn, but was still a handsome thing. He held it in the palm of his big hand as he looked at it. 'I have lost that watch,' he said. 'It has been all over the world with me.' Like Mary's little lamb, it was always with its owner. It was the parting gift of a dying mother. To part with it would be like the giving up of a brother. 'Yes, I love it and I am going to keep it,' and he sat down like a stone, with never a particle of humor in his face."

Nearly all the creditors have accepted the offer of settlement. A few, however, whose claims are small, refuse to accept the stipulated amount and state that they will take all or nothing.

The business will be carried on by Herman and Charles Ehrlich, sons of Jacob Ehrlich, under the style of J. Ehrlich Sons. As previously published in the REVIEW, the business was established in 1864. Mr. Ehrlich became interested in an outside speculation in 1886, which unfortunately proved unsuccessful and he lost heavily.

Shortly after the brothers of his partner brought suit to recover $25,000 damages, claiming that the defendant in withdrawing stipulated financial backing, jeopardized the concern's interests. On the advice of counsel, Mr. Ehrlich conferred with his creditors, and to secure them, a transfer of the business was made to his wife, Mrs. B. Ehrlich. This was in 1886. On account of the recent depression in business and inability to meet obligations Mrs. Ehrlich was obliged to make an assignment, naming Louis S. Phillips assignee. The settlement having been effected amicably, the new firm has resumed business at the old stand.

At the recent fire in the Astor House, which communicated with the premises of the firm, stock was damaged by smoke and water to the extent of a few hundred dollars. The rear of the store, which was thoroughly drenched with water, has been renovated and repapered, the loss having been adjusted recently by the insurance company.

Sympathy for the Jaccard Jewelry Co.

The announcement of the failure of the Jaccard Jewelry Company will be a painful surprise to the people of Kansas City. This company suffered a severe loss by a disastrous fire three years ago, and while it made a heroic effort to recover, the prevailing hard times forced it to succumb. The gentlemen connected with the company have the satisfaction of knowing that they have the sympathy of the entire community in their misfortune.—Kansas City Journal.

THE BUSINESS GOES ON.

But Samuel Zeitner Who Was the Proprietor
Now Figures as an Employee.

Max Rosenbaum, assignee for Samuel Zeitner, diamond setter, 80 Nassau street, whose failure was recently noted, has filed his schedule which reads as follows: Assets, $1,774 85; actual value, $887.72; liabilities, $5,197.32. The creditors are Durlach Bros., Otto Kruh, W. Westein, S. Rehmer, Eichberg & Co., S. Prager, B. Berman, H. Levy and J. M. Lyon.

The offer of settlement, viz.: 25 cents cash on the dollar was refused by a number of creditors who claimed that the debtor pay could 50 cents at least. Mr. Zeitner said his relatives were furnishing the necessary collateral to meet the obligations and under the circumstances he was unable to increase the amount. Mr. Herwig, attorney for the debtor, in an interview with a REVIEW reporter, stated that the only preference made was that to Zeitner's father-in-law for $500 for money loaned. This preference, under the law, however, will amount to only $280, being a third of the value of the net assets. The debtor, notwithstanding the depression in business, had within the past two months liquidated $81,500 indebtedness and had only through the assistance of relatives been able to continue business at all.

A JESSE JAMES WATCH.

One from the Effects of the Dead Outlaw Figures in a Kentucky Tragedy.

According to a dispatch sent over the wires Harry Rountree, a famous horseman and wealthy dealer in blooded horses whose home is in Lebanon, Ky., was killed there. He was driving from Lebanon to his farm and kicked backward from his seat in the cart. His feet caught and his head fell back touching the ground. In this condition he was dragged two miles at a furious rate, mashing his skull into a pulp.

Rountree visited St. Joseph some years ago on a peculiar mission, and it proved successful owing to the assistance which he received from County Clerk Enos Craig, who at the time, was chief of police or marshal as he was then called of St. Joseph.

Many years ago, while young Rountree's father was visiting Mammoth Cave, he was robbed by Jesse James, and among the valuables taken was a gold watch that had been presented him by Proctor Knott. When the celebrated bandit was killed at this place the watch was recovered and returned to the elder Rountree through the efforts of the son and Marshal Craig, and when the elder Rountree died he left it to his only son, who was wearing it when he came to his untimely end. Several years ago young Rountree's mother met with a similar accident by a runaway horse dragging her through town, from which she sustained injuries that resulted in her death.

H. A. Mair of Atlanta, Ga., and his bride spent Carnival week in New Orleans.
